Special To The Star

MT. GILEAD, Dec. 16.—J. Wesley England, who has been employed for several years as a private night watchman here, was named marshal Monday by Mayor G. J. Young to fill the unexpired term of W. R. Corwin.

A number of requests for more street lights have been received by the council. Three were turned over to the street lighting committee of which Councilman Albert Payne is the chairman. One is on East High street in front of the courthouse, another at the intersection of East Union and Bank streets, and the third in Lincoln avenue just east of the Hydraulic Press Mfg. Co. plant.

An ordinance covering the regulations for the use of the city dumping grounds presented by H. C. Mozier, chairman of the ordinance committee, was passed.

The clerk was instructed to notify a number of individuals and companies to repair sidewalks in certain streets. Street Commissioner Bert Pendleton was authorized to have the sidewalks at the northeast corner of West Union and North Cherry streets repaired.

Dr. B. D. Buxton, city clerk, has refused to issue a newer tapping permit for the Eagles Lodge rooms unless they pay an assessment as well as the regular tapping permit charge. They offered a check in payment of the tapping charge but refused to pay the assessment.

Y-INDUS BASKETEERS TO PLAY KENYON

STATE Y CHAMPIONS
BOOK COLLEGE QUINT
FOR CAGE ENCOUNTER

Y-Indus Club at Full Strength
Important Court Battle.

WELL, not Ohio conference basketball teams are coming in the class of the Y-Indus club will be recruited Wednesday at Kenyon college to aid of basketeers to play the Ohio Y. M. C. A. in the Shovel court. The strongest Ohio team in any means but basketball, it is generally known, is being counted on to come here that will be the worth of the line-up.

The Y-Indus team will have its first game available for the collegians. It will be in the last four of last one or two of first stringers have been in at game time.

George Star To Play
The leading outfit of the conference known here but it is the Y-Indus that Dad Stock, coach, will be at the center of the Y-Indus Stock will be the major problems for the locals. Inability to stop scoring antics has cost the opposing team to the short end of the game. It may prove to be a good trick in the path of the locals but for additional help.

Shelby High school's Whippet cagers gave some idea of why they are the favorites to repeat for the N. C. O. basketball championship when they ran roughshod over the Willard net squad last Saturday night. The Young coached team, paced by the brilliant Culbertson, had little difficulty in leaving the opponents stranded while the collected points almost at will.

It is far too early to count the Shelby outfit as "in" for the league title, despite the strong early season sentiment in their favor but it behoves any team counting on being in the chase to be armed for big game when they clash with the border town boys.

Culbertson will provide the main strength on offense with his lightning floorwork and uncanny shooting eye but the team's defense will not lack in power. The outfit that beats Shelby will be an odds on choice to win the coveted flag.

Unless Harding High school devises some means of stopping Turley, Delaware forward star, Friday night will probably turn into a nightmare for the Presidents. The boy is fast, make no mistake about that he can shoot. The manner in which he heaves the ball at the net is probably not one which most coaches would call correct but what counts is dropping them through and he can do that. He can shoot from nearly any position as Harding is apt to discover when he lines up the basket on the floor of The Star auditorium.

Game Looks Tough

This battle may be the first game of the year in which the full forces of the team will not have an opportunity to display their paces in six games so far the second stringers have played in at least part of the game. Bill Fetter, Eddie Crawford, and Duane Clark form the main strength of the second team. Harold Carroll, a full star plays with the second team. While Chuck Osterholt is as popular as much this season as he can hardly be relegated to second team class. He and Keller are fighting hard to cinch a place to have Keller at present have the inside track.

Cougars To Advance on Rose Bowl on Dec. 22

By The Associated Press
PULLMAN, Wash. Dec. 16—Coach O. E. Hollingsberry plans to take his Washington State college football team to California two days earlier than originally scheduled so the fans may see his eleven in action before the New Year's day game with Alabama in the Pasadena rose bowl.

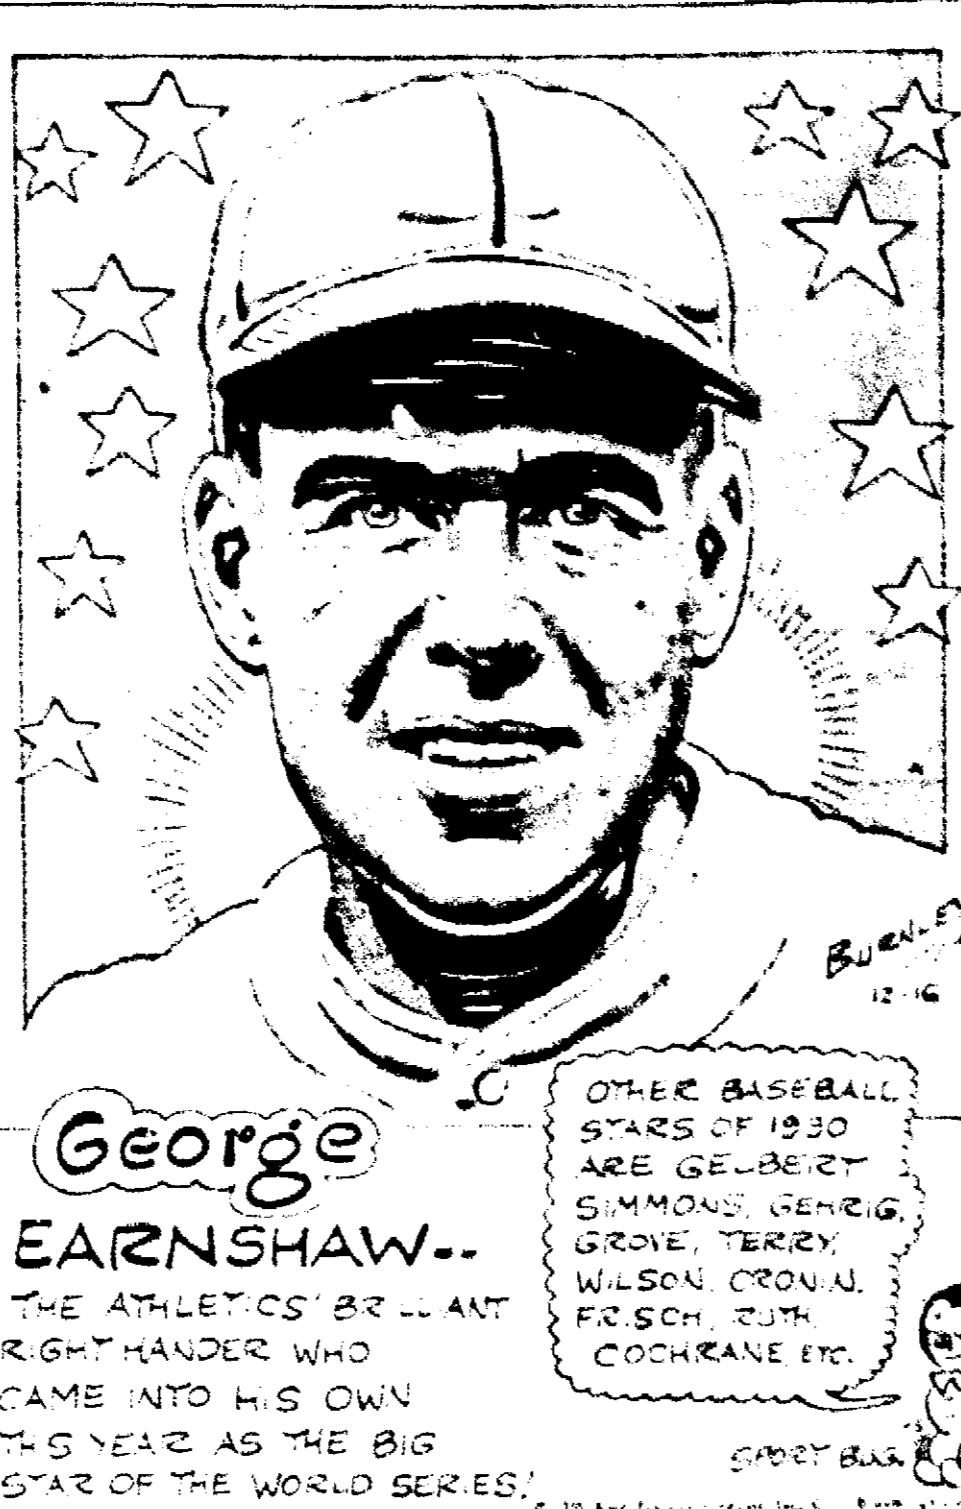

"Because of insistent pressure from California fans who want to see the Cougars practice as soon as possible," Hollingsberry said, "our traveling schedule has been changed so we will leave Portland for Pasadena Dec. 22, so we can arrive December 24."

Today the Cougars will play Alabama by proxy. Two teams will be selected, one coached for Alabama plays, and the next four days will be spent in perfecting an offense against the tricks the Crimson tide is expected to use.

Experts have estimated the age of a cypress tree growing in Tallahassee, Fla., at from 2,000 to 2,500 years.

HARDING-GALION GRID BATTLE SHIFTED TO LATER DATE IN '31

League Approves 25 Cent Admission Price for Basketball.

Harding and Galion will not play their annual game next year at such an early date as has been the case in the past according to a schedule adopted last night by officials of the N. C. O. league. The game has formerly been contested on Sept. 27 but in the future will be played on Nov. 21.

The rotating schedule adopted also provided that the Mansfield-Bucyrus conflict will be moved up to a later playing date.

With the coaches and faculty managers present the board approved officials for the football games for next year. Some who were employed this season will not be used next year. Several new ones were agreed on by the board.

What will be good news to students and teachers in the league schools comes with the adoption by the board of a 25 cent basketball admission price. The tickets for the game must be purchased by the student at the home school before the game. This arrangement was adopted only for basketball but may be carried over into succeeding football campaigns.

CONFERENCE COURT RACE MAY BE CLOSE

Findlay, Bowling Green Favor ed To Battle for Title.

By The Associated Press
COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 16—Five veterans of last season and three excellent sophomore players form the Baldwin-Wallace 1930-31 cage team, and Coach Ray Watts feels he has a good machine that should enjoy a winning season. The five vets are Alvin Rand, Lakewood, guards; Kenneth Weber, Cleveland, center; Edwin Schuster, Clinton, forward; and Harry Anderson, Struthers, guard or forward.

Dan Pesut, Cleveland, and Arne Klein, Willoughby, are the most promising sophomores and will probably play quite regularly. Glenn Proffit, Cleveland, is another promising sophomore.

Bowling Green has six lettermen and some fine reserve material available, while Findlay has nine lettermen, including Hutton, the conference high scorer in 1929.

Bluffton will be in the race with a good team, including a number of veterans. Toledo has a small fast team, but lack of weight might handicap the Rockets.

Findlay is expected to play the usual and peculiar "sleeper" type of game, with Hutton on the receiving end of the long passes.

On paper, Findlay is the favorite for the title with Bowling Green a close second. Bluffton has the edge on Defiance with Toledo's prospects anything but good.

BRUINS FIND FIRST BASEMAN ON SQUAD

Baltimore Outfielder May Become Understudy for Initial Post.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Dec. 16—After hunting all over the baseball landscape for another first baseman, the Cubs discovered they bought one from Baltimore last summer although they purchased him for an outfielder.

Vincent Barton, a 22-year-old prospect played in the outfield because Baltimore had a capable first baseman and needed an outfielder. After the Cubs failed to obtain Jim Bottomley from the St. Louis Cardinals, Manager Rogers Hornsby and President William L. Veeck wondered if Barton might not be converted into a first baseman.

Investigation revealed that Barton played all his baseball at the initial corner until the Orioles moved him into the outfield. Hornsby says he will be given plenty of opportunity to prepare himself to understudy Charlie Grimm and George Kelly.

CHRISTNER SCORES K. O.

By The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 16—K. O. Christner, Akron heavyweight, knocked out George Panks of Pittsburgh in the sixth round of a scheduled 10-round bout featuring a card for the benefit of the unemployed last night. Christner weighed 199. Panks 192.

Twelve of the athletes are from the east, with the Big Ten supplying ten. A practice session and issuing of equipment was scheduled for Dyche stadium at Northwestern this afternoon. The contest will be the sixth of the series in which the far west has triumphed three times. The eastern delegation won its victories in 1928 and 1929.

Bowling Green has six lettermen and some fine reserve material available, while Findlay has nine lettermen, including Hutton, the conference high scorer in 1929.

Bluffton will be in the race with a good team, including a number of veterans. Toledo has a small fast team, but lack of weight might handicap the Rockets.

PURDUE WINS

Big Ten Champs Hand Irish Necktie of Year.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Dec. 16—The Big Ten hasn't been able to accomplish anything against Notre Dame in football recently, but the conference is away to a good start against the Irish in basketball.

Epworth, winner of the 1929-30 Big Ten title accounted for the league's second triumph of the season over Notre Dame last night at Lafayette, 34 to 22. Last week Northwestern trounced the Irish 44 to 29.

U. I. was struggling to regain prestige in the big Ten after its year of tenure suffered another setback last night. The Hawkeyes mostly sophomores, weakened by the loss of their seniors, were defeated by Bradley college, 17 to 18.

Continuing preparations for the annual race for the North Central Ohio league cage championship, four teams of the class A circuit will engage non-league opponents this week. The schedule of play does not start until Jan. 2 and the loop entries are not filling away the weeks until time for the title chase.

Ashland High will play its third start of the year, this time with Norwalk taking the opposing end of the hardwood floor. This game will be played tonight in Ashland.

Ashland has won one and lost one game this year, defeating Polk

High and losing to Berea. The Ashlanders will call a halt to non-league play at the finish of this encounter, marking time from this point until the clash with Huron on Jan. 2 in the opening N. C. O. battle.

Galion will attempt to stretch its record into two consecutive victories Friday night when it collides with Believel on the home floor. The Cotton team was on the long end of the score last Friday.

stress, so I sternly put down all trace of chagrin, and inquired naively: "Did she send you slippers and pipe, too, Dicky?"

He stared at me for the fraction of a second, and then with a burst of laughter he rolled up the crimson lounging robe into a careless ball and tossed it into a neighboring chair. Before I guessed what he meant to do, he plucked me bodily from the chair, and kissed me roughly.

"If you had what you deserve, you impudent little—word-forbidden—son of a—censor," he growled, "you'd be playing an accompaniment to the 'dog and the walnut tree.' But, the laws of the land protect you, unfortunately. Now you stay where you're put for a minute."

He took off his coat and waistcoat and put on the robe I had given him, stooped to his shoes and changed them for his slippers. The pipe he reluctantly deposited upon the mantel, and then with a firm hold upon my wrist he seated himself again in the big chair and drew me down upon his lap.

"Shut your eyes and hold out your hand for your Christmas present," he directed.

He hurried out of the room, and I sat, wondering, before the fire, until he came back, one hand and arm carefully held behind him.

"This is the darndest mix-up," he said, his face reddening. "I don't know what possessed her, but well—here—" he suddenly brought his arm from behind his back. "Edie sent me this today for Christmas."

Over his arm depended a crimson lounging robe of quilted silk, with narrow lines of embroidery outlining collar and cuffs and hem.

It did not approach mine in texture or beauty of the embroidery—it was a much cheaper robe throughout, but that was not the thought which was flaming before my jealous eyes, and which I knew was bringing an embarrassed brick-red flush even to Dicky's neck and ears.

The knowledge that this gift of a lounging robe was one which might be expected from a wife, a mother, or other feminine relative, but which was altogether too intimate a gift to be presented to a married man by his feminine of face partner.

I wondered what Dicky would say if I yielded to the primitive impulse of rioting within me, urging me to seize the robe and thrust it into the flames.

He could not logically object to such an act. I told myself grimly, with the remembrances of the exquisite silver and glass flower container brought me by Philip Veritz, which Dicky had hurled into the fire in an apparent accident that I was sure had been premeditated. But I know only too well that one of my most effective weapons with which Dicky is in come under

The appeal case of William Hatcher, penitentiary convict, against the state of Ohio was scheduled to be heard today in the third district court of appeals at Lima.

CHAPTER 31

A Fruitless Appeal

GARRETT WENTWORTH'S un-sainted sympathy, made a difference to Fanny. He came of a family, had a background, and a position that even the Brownbecks would respect. He was fine and sane and highly sensitive. And Garrett believed that it was an outrage that Fanny should not see her little daughter.

Now that Fanny was properly lodged and fed and clothed, had work that she liked and was no longer haunted by the spectre of discharge, some of her old impetuosity gradually reawakened.

One night, soon after her talk with Garrett, she was so shaken with longing for Sheila that she told herself that she would die if she could not see her soon. She determined then to throw herself on David's mercy. Until the break came David had never been unkind. He was not all Brownbeck; he could see two sides. And surely by this time his anger and resentment would have lessened.

She wrote that night, tearing up a dozen letters before she was satisfied.

"Dear David," the final letter ran. "I have thought of asking you to see me the next time you come to New York, but I realize a meeting would be too painful to both of us. I gave Sheila to you because I believed she would be better off with you. I still believe that it is for her good that she stay with you but the need to see her has grown so overwhelming that I feel that I cannot endure the present arrangement. Nor do I honestly believe that it could in any way harm Sheila to spend a few weeks with me every year, during her vacation and mine. I can assure you that there is nothing in my life or environment or friends that you could object to. I plan to take her to the seashore.

"It hardly seems necessary to point out that a sacred and binding responsibility like parenthood seldom works only one way. As Sheila is my responsibility, in lesser measure perhaps, I am hers. Nor do I believe that it would be for her good and all-round development if she were taught to think that responsibility altogether.

"Your kindness in the past makes me believe you will grant this greatest of kindnesses. Knowing me as you did you must have realized a measure of my regret at the suffering which came to you through our unfortunate marriage."

She hesitated, and then signed it simply Fanny. The first envelope she addressed to the bank, then she remembered David's secretary had been with him for years and might recognize her handwriting. So she addressed it to his home sealed and stamped it and went downstairs at one in the morning and mailed it in a letter box on Fourth avenue.

The next afternoon Leona brought the letter, along with several circulars and bills, upstairs to Mrs. Frost who was dressing to go out. Mrs. Frost examined the mail carelessly, gasped suddenly and sat down.

"Ain't you feeling well?" asked Leona solicitously. "You look kind of peaked."

"No. Yes. I'm all right, but I find I have to attend to some business. Have Ben bring the car around at once."

"But you'll be late to Mrs. Em-melle's party."

"This is more important than any party," said Mrs. Frost unsteadily. Leona had not seen her so agitated in years. Twenty minutes later she was clasped with her cousin Edward Philbrick.

"But the letter is addressed to David; he certainly never authorized me to open his private correspondence," protested Mr. Philbrick.

"He certainly authorized you to take full charge of his divorce," said David, "but I did not want to be told any of the minor details."

"The case is long since over. If David does not care to hear from his ex-wife he has only to burn the letter or turn it over to me."

"He'd be certain to open it—it would think she was sick or needed money or something like that. But I know who's after Sheila. I know she would be sooner or later. And I won't have David upset. He's just begun to get over it this last year, since Mary Morton came home. Her return was a blessing."

Mary Morton and her mother had gone to Europe a few weeks after David's sudden marriage. The war drove them to Southern California, where they established themselves. There Mrs. Morton had died about a year after David's divorce. Mary brought her mother's body back to Cloughbarrie for burial, opened her old home and remained.

"I thought David rather avoided Mary," said Mr. Philbrick curiously.

"He did at first. But I had her to dinner and Mary asked him to call. He did finally. Now he goes regularly. Not often but regularly. And I won't have his affair with Mary interfered with a second time by—that woman." Mrs. Frost reached over and picked up the letter. "You don't know what I've gone through the past three years and a half," she said hellishly, and deliberately tore open Fanny's letter, settled her eye-glasses firmly on her Roman nose and read it through to the end. Mr. Philbrick watched her uncomfortably. He had never been fond of his cousin; now only his strong sense of kinship kept him from actively hating her.

"It's as I thought," Mrs. Frost announced triumphantly. "She's after Sheila; coolly suggests that Sheila should spend her vacations with her. It's a good thing I opened that letter. There's more here than meets the eye. She gives a strong hint for an interview. You know

David's soft streak. If she once got hold of him, broke down and cried or pretended to Heaven, knows what she might get out of him!

Mr. Philbrick's family caution took alarm.

"I don't believe David is as soft as you think. He contended stoutly. "David hardened, matured since his trouble and poor Judson's death." But he was arguing against his own fears and he agreed to answer the letter on lines laid down by Mrs. Frost.

"David Frost regretted," Mr. Philbrick wrote Fanny, "that he is unable to accede to your request. Under the present arrangement the little girl is entirely happy and content and it does not seem right or reasonable to upset and unsettle her. She is still too young and too sensitive to be burdened with responsibilities or divided loyalties. Very sincerely, etc."

Fanny had worked herself up to such a pitch of expectation, was so all but certain that David would let her have Sheila the next summer, that she had a small nervous collapse from disappointment. It was long time before she pulled herself out of it. A hard year followed.

She filled her life as best she could with her friends and Garrett's friends, the girls where she worked, her housekeeping, the many delightful things Garrett found for her to do in New York.

Garrison kept his word, and did not make over love to her. She was not in love with Garrison, but without him life would have been intolerable.

What Fanny really wanted was Sheila. The desire, the hunger for Sheila. She was always thinking about her, always making plans to see her. And lying in bed one early morning in May, she made a sudden resolve. David or no David, Brownbecks or no Brownbecks she would see Sheila, and soon.

Sheila's birthday was next week. Was it possible that her baby would soon be 10 years old? How she must have changed! What had they done to her? What had they told her about her mother? She would go to Cloughbarrie.

She must have the answers to her questions; must find out what they had done to her little girl.

To Be Continued.

Central Junior Faculty Preps for Cage Tilt

SEVEN members of the Central Junior High school faculty are in training, intense training this week for the annual faculty-versus-faculty basketball game Friday night at 7:30 at the Y. M. C. A.

Last year the faculty was going strong in the first and second quarters and the score was 12-11 faculty. But that participated second year, didn't go its stuff and at the finish the score was 4-14 visitors.

What a kink the students get out of young, the otherwise reserved faculty members, leaping over the fence at the second, third and fourth trying to be congenial and putting in their best effort. The game is one of the highlights for the boys and one of the high points for the teachers, too, in the year for the teachers.

A compilation of ages, weights and heights gives the faculty a big edge, but the game is one of "mind over matter."

The faculty-five will weigh about 445 pounds and the weights of the varsity boys totalled in about 550 pounds. The boys on the team are all about 14 years old, and the faculty—well, to be considerate, we won't say that age.

In height, the faculty is about two feet higher as a team than the student five.

DECLARES PEOPLE LOYAL

By The Associated Press
MADRID, Dec. 16.—In an exclusive statement to the Associated Press today General Damasco Berenguer, premier of Spain, reiterated his assertion that yesterday's revolutionary movement had been suppressed, that the army of Spain was everywhere loyal and that public opinion was unanimously behind the government.
"Order is being rapidly restored in all parts of the country," he said.

The revolutionary movement failed absolutely because it received no support from the people, who have given unmistakable evidence of loyalty to and confidence in the government. The current ministry is strengthened by this unanimous support of public opinion and will continue to perform its duties without fear and without

Dispatch from Paris Says King

By The Associated Press
LONDON, Dec. 16.—A Paris dispatch to the London Daily Mail today said official quarters had received information that the Spanish insurgents were gaining the upper hand and that King Alfonso might leave Madrid today.

Gibraltar dispatches stated that the Spanish government had called part of the famous Spanish Foreign Legion out of Morocco to combat the revolutionary movement. One thousand Foreign Legionnaires were disembarked at Algeciras, last night, entraining
immediately for Madrid.

GIVES CAUSE OF FAILURE

Desertion of Artillery Corps Fatal
to Revolt Plans, Franco Says.

By The Associated Press
LISBON, Portugal, Dec. 16.—Major Ramon Franco told an interviewer today that he and his compatriots had failed yesterday in their attempt to overthrow the Spanish monarchy and establish a republic because the artillery corps, after pledging adhesion to the movement, backed out at the last minute.

"When the artillery opened fire against us," he commented, "there was only one alternative—surrender. Nevertheless, nothing can arrest the Republican movement which will soon swamp Spain. In one month a republic will be proclaimed."

He said the object of their attempt was "to establish liberty and impose a constitution on the Spanish people which, republican or otherwise, would permit Spain to breath freely. I wished out of patriotism to put an end to the tyranny which lasted eight years and that's what we decided to do."

Major Franco declined to say how he had escaped from a prison
a few weeks ago but said that he had been hiding in a village near Madrid. "I did not want to go too far away from the government of his majesty for I knew that a revolution was inevitable."

BLOCKS MOVE
TO HALT SUIT

Crawford County Judge Dis-
misses Bank Receiver's

Petition Today.

Special To The Star
BUCYRUS, O., Dec. 16.—Efforts of A. E. Evenson, receiver for the defunct Marion Citizens National bank, to block court action to recover $206,700 from the board of directors and finance committee were halted in common pleas court here
this afternoon.

Judge J. Walter Wright dissolved a temporary injunction, refused a permanent injunction and dismissed the receiver's petition.
Evenson was ordered to pay the costs.

Evenson sued Miss Mary Volk,
former cashier of the Galion bank,
after she had started court action against the directors and finance committee in behalf of herself and other stockholders of the bank.

The receiver charged that such a court action would delay final settlement of the bank's affairs and that the plaintiff was not acting in good faith.

Miss Volk in her original suit declared that members of the board of directors and finance committee had full knowledge and had authorized the investments made by J. E.
Casey, then president but who is now facing federal court action.
She sought to recover $206,700 for herself and other stockholders.

On their return to Los Angeles
he said he sold his interest in the sanitarium and went to Negrado, Calif., where he operated a tuberculosis sanitarium until he entered the army in 1917.

"She was drinking at times but at times would go for weeks without taking liquor," Shepard testified.

"I scolded her but she said she couldn't help it."

Shepard told of serving in the Philippines and of efforts to prevent his wife from drinking in the islands.

"Several times she was under the influence of liquor and would break social engagements and remain in bed," he said, adding she refused to go to a hospital.

The major said he wrote Curtis McCoskey, brother of Mrs. Shepard, that "her drinking was undermining her health" and that following drinking spree, "she was afraid
she was going to be like her mother."

Contrary to public interest was the meat of the objection relayed to the committee by A. Dana Hoddon, chief of the department's vise office, when he was called to the witness stand. He was willing to go on in secret session but the committee refused and asked him to object to having presented publicly.

In an earlier executive session
the committee had obtained data on the operation of the vise system from a former official of the office. It sought amplification of this from Hoddon.
